Car License May Be Reduced

Whether or not automobile licenses in Alberta shall be reduced for 1933 is a question now being considered by the Government. Premier Brownlee is quoted as saying. A number of alternative sources are under review, all leading up to the question whether any reduction shall be made, and if so to what extent and by what method. It was Mr. Brownlee's understanding that the question of such licenses was to have been considered at the forthcoming inter provincial conference in Winnipeg, though announcement has just been made that Saskatchewan has already decided upon a scaling down. The rates in Alberta and Saskatchewan are at present the same.

No Liberal Meeting.

The Stony Plain Liberal association, which had intended holding a mass meeting in Stony Plain in the near future, has been forced to postpone it until after the Xmas holidays. The intention of the executive is to have Hon. Charles Stewart and W. R. Howson, the newly elected Liberal leader, speak at the meeting. Due to the demands on these speakers, it is impossible to have them before Xmas. This meeting is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest by many farmers who, not seeing any improvement in conditions, are anxious to hear both sides of our financial story. Notice will be given early in January as to the date of the meeting. —[Advt.]

The W. L. Concert

Concert-givers were given the trust of the season at Moose hall Friday night, when the local Women's Institute gave their annual show. The musical selections had been made with meticulous care, and the rendition of these by the different artists left nothing to be desired. The piece sung by the Misses Malloch and Outway; the Kathleen James Twiss solo; and the final sketch "Matrimonial Bureau" seemed to catch the popular fancy.

Mayer Outway filled the job of chairman in a very acceptable manner.

The dance which followed was well patronized, music being supplied by Barth's orchestra. The program followed:

Vocal solo—The Floral Dances
F. W. Yates
Piano duet—Miss Outway and Miss Malloch
Male quartet—Carry Me Back to Old Virginia, Mamma, Hard Rock, L. Outway, G. Barth, F. W. Yates
Vocal solo—Song of the Slave
Mrs. Yates
Trio duet—F. W. Yates, and L. Outway
Shakespeare—Miss Ward
Vocal solo—F. W. Yates, singing the Songs of Araby—L. Outway
Mixed quartet—Humpty Blythe, Solo—Friend of Mine—T. J. Handwick
The A. B. C. Duet—Mr. and Mrs. Yates
Sketch—There's a Matrimonial Bureau

Heskel-Scheidman.

On Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 29, the Lutheran church at Mawassie was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Scheidman of Duffield, became the bride of Mr. Henry Heskel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Heskel of Main St., Stony Plain.

The bride was charming in a white-crope outfit and lace gown, and a bride and veil was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of red and yellow roses. The bride was attended by her sister Miss Lena Scheidman and the groom's sister Miss Marie Heskel, groomed alike in ivory-crope outfit.

The groomsmen were Messrs. John Heskel and William Scheidman.

The pastor, Rev. C. H. Boppert, performed the ceremony; and the Wedding March was played by Mrs. J. Scheidman, guest to the bride. Following the service at the church the bridal party and guests to the number of 70 proceeded to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held; the bride's mother, groomed in black, sat at the head of the table and groom.

The bride's table was decorated with the wedding cake, and pink and white streamers suspended from the ceiling. The happy young couple will be at home after the 15th inst. at their home in Mawassie district.

Now-- All Together.

Municipal and school board elections are over for another year throughout Canada's western provinces. Reports indicate that, generally speaking, the elections this year were contested with a vigor surpassing that which usually characterizes such contests. This, no doubt, is but another result of the difficult and critical times through which the world is passing, the inevitable outcome of which is discontent, dissatisfaction with whatever is done, no matter what its nature may be, or who may be responsible for the doing of it. Another factor accounting for the keenness of many contests was the entry of a political party in Provincial and Federal affairs into the realm of municipal affairs, thus introducing a new element, and in some cases a new bitterness, into municipal and school board elections.

It is no doubt true that at no time can men and women, clothed with responsibility by their fellow citizens to direct public policies and manage public affairs, please all classes. No matter what they may do, or may leave undone, certain people will be dissatisfied. This, however, is especially true at a time like the present when all governing bodies are confronted with the two-fold task of exercising the strictest economy on the one hand, and of being faced with the necessity of making extraordinary expenditures on the other hand. Both these things must be done—the first because of falling revenues resulting from the inability of many people to pay taxes, and the second because prevailing conditions make it obligatory to provide work or relief for countless numbers of people. The result is a demand for more and more so-called "free" services on the part of governments, for people who have not the means to obtain these services for themselves, at a time when governments cannot possibly get the money to pay for the so-called "free" services.

Dissatisfaction and discontent, ending in unreasonableness on the part of many, is the inevitable result. Those things which many people are demanding, if granted, mean the imposition of still heavier burdens on others who are making a valiant struggle to keep their own heads above water and not become charges on the community. Those whom the citizenship made responsible for administration of public policies and affairs thus found themselves between two fires, and, with their hands tied financially, making it impossible for them to do many of the things they undoubtedly would have been glad to do were it only possible.

Some experienced and conscientious public servants have, as a result of this general dissatisfaction, been defeated, their places on public bodies being taken by others, some of whom, again, have captured the popular fancy and support as a result of more or less sweeping promises which they will soon discover they, too, with all the best intention in the world, will be unable to fulfill.

Service on municipal councils, school boards, and other public bodies is, at best and under the most favorable circumstances, a more or less thankless task, while under present prevailing adverse conditions it is even more so, inviting, as it does, little but abuse, misrepresentation of motives and acts, and loss of whatever popularity a person may have possessed. Such service also involves on the part of the person accepting public office. In these days it requires every moment of one's time and energies to keep their own personal business matters in solvent shape, neglect of them means disaster.

But service on public bodies is a public duty. It is a duty that must be discharged by some one, and those who are willing to make the sacrifice are deserving of the thanks and cordial goodwill of their fellow citizens, regardless of the fact that their every act may not meet with approval.

Therefore, now that the smoke of our municipal and school board battles has floated away, now that the decisions of the majority have been rendered, it behooves all citizens of good will, and loyal to the democratic institutions of this country, to get behind their representatives whoever they may be, and, irrespective of the fact whether they were their personal choice or not, give them a helping hand. Let carping criticism now cease. Let all personalities be forgotten. Rather, let one and all stand united in support of their elected representatives and work harmoniously together with one single purpose of doing the best possible under existing circumstances, helping each other, and thereby helping all.

And in so doing greater consideration may well be given to this important fact which too many people are rather inclined to ignore in these troublous days to forget, namely, that more can be learned from the experiences of the past than from all the text books of theories or the idealistic visions of inexperienced and untired visionaries. What is good in the past we should retain, while that which, through experience, we have learned to be weak and faulty should be remedied or disregarded, being substituted by what that same experience has shown to be needed, rather than to invoke some purely theoretical idea which, when put to the test of practical operation, is more likely than not to land us in a deeper morass than the one from which we are striving to extricate ourselves.

Woman Is Honored By French Legion

Old Tradition Has Been Shattered For Second Time

An old tradition which dates back to Napoleon and which kept French women from rising in grade in the Legion of Honor has been shattered by the award of the rank of Commander of the Legion to a woman, for the second time in history.

Mme. Philippe de Villemorin, millionaire business woman and one of the world's greatest dealers in seeds and grains, has been promoted from Officer to Commander, joining in that rank Countess de Noailles, postess, the only other woman Commander in the Legion's history.

The promotion came in the distribution of 600 ribbons and rosettes of the Legion of Honor to reward services rendered towards the success of the Colonial Exposition. Madame de Villemorin had created the floral decoration of the exposition grounds.

Widowed during the war, Mme. de Villemorin left the front, where she had won citations as a war nurse, and took charge of the 200-year-old grain firm.

She travelled through Africa, Indo-China, Java, Egypt, Australia and the Orient, to select and improve the seeds of tobacco, rice, coffee, peanuts, and other colonial crops. She operates agronomic laboratories and largely was responsible for saving the French cut-flower industry from ruinous Dutch and Italian competition.

Shanghai Has German Paper

City Now Benefits Wide Variety In Daily Newspapers

Into the babel of Shanghai's already complex newspaper world still another foreign language daily has made its debut. It is the German language Deutsches Shanghai Zeitung. Perhaps no other city in the world boasts of so many different kinds of daily papers.

Published in the English language there is the old established English journal, the North China Daily News, so-called because of its founding most foreigners lived in Canton, to which Shanghai was then North China, although it is far from that geographically speaking. Two American dailies, the China Press in the morning and the Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury, an afternoon paper, vie with the third, the Shanghai Times, which has an English editor, although it is not of that nationality as to capital.

They heal the surfaces that have become inflamed by the attacks of the parasites and serve to restore the strength of the child that has been undermined by the draughts that the worms have made upon it, and their operation is altogether health-giving.

Trap For Scoundrels

"Wall Of Invincible Paper" On Germany's Western Frontier

An invincible wall which nobody can penetrate unnoticed will soon be "erected" at certain points of Germany's western frontier as the latest device against scoundrels.

It is a "wall of invincible paper" which cannot be seen at all; but whoever penetrates this wall strikes an alarm in the Customs office. There an indicator promptly announces the spot where the intruder has crossed the frontier. A special device informs the officers of "blind alarms" by hand, dogs or don't.

Bidding For Foreign Markets

Germany Plans To Head Out Floating Industrial "Fair"

In an endeavor to regain some of the foreign markets Germany lost as a result of the world war, an association of German manufacturers of Hagen, Westphalia, plan to send out a floating industrial "fair" early next year on a trade crusade to South America and the Far East, according to commerce department advices from Consul J. M. Bruns at Hamburg.

The 14,000-ton Hamburg-South American liner S.S. Cap Norte has been chartered for the "fair." It will visit more than 20 foreign ports of the world, leaving Hamburg or Bremen shortly after the first of the year and remaining away 18 months.

"It will sail first to South American ports, later visiting British East India, China and Japan," the consul's report said.

The "Floating Fair" has been so organized that even small firms may take part in this piece of practical trade promotion. It will offer for sale and will exhibit a great range of German industrial products, especially hardware and tools.

New Orleans Woman Would Open Store In Alaska

In New Orleans, La., a certain woman is seeking for knowledge of Canada's far north. She also seeks knowledge of the Dominion's currency.

The woman, whose name was not revealed, wrote a tourist agency at Calgary for the information as she apparently wanted to open a store in Alaska, which rests in Canada's back sub-Arctic.

The agency, however, told her there were no railways to the shore coast of the Arctic coast and that it would be doubtful if the candy and medicine business would be very profitable in that district. They also told her Canadian money was in dollars and cents not pounds and shillings as she believed.

Reproduction Of Old Temple

Work Continues To Build But Duplicate Temple May Be

The Chicago World's Fair breaks ground for the great Maya temple that is to be a dominating feature. It reproduces the temple of Uxmal Yucatan, built more than 1,000 years ago by the most enlightened sages of North America. The original was generations in building, the duplicate goes up in 60 days. With electric cutting tools the grotesque head of a Mayan god can be turned out in a few hours; but the original Maya, who did not even know how to harden copper until a lifetime in bringing a face or a column into form. This temple alone will serve all the ends of a world's fair—it will be a peak of the rise of man.—Christian Science Monitor.

Good Progress Being Made With History Of The World War Now Being Compiled In Britain

With twenty-nine of the probable forty volumes of the history of the world war now completed, Great Britain is well ahead of all the other belligerent powers in the preparation of an official story of the events of the years 1914-1918 for the benefit of the living as well as of posterity. It is thought that the last volume will be ready twenty years hence, but that is really more of a guess than a certainty.

From the historical section of the committee of Imperial Defense, under whose aegis Britain's comprehensive memorial of the past and guide for the future is being prepared, this correspondent has just obtained a detailed account of how this historical task is being handled. So far it has cost 200,000 pounds sterling, though that total includes the cost of archival work which would have to be done anyway.

Of the histories completed there are: Naval Operations, 3 volumes; Merchant Navy, 2; Sea-Air Trade, 2; Gallipoli Campaign, 1; Egypt-Palestine, 2; Mesopotamia, 4, and Yugoslavia and Caucasus, 1. In addition to these 20 volumes there have also been issued five of the contemplated twelve dealing with the western front, three of the five dealing with the war in the air, and another—in diary form—entitled "Principal Events of the War."

At the outset of the war the British war service numbered 600 vessels of all kinds. But by November, 1918, this force had been increased to 1,001. Such vast naval assets records of the events and movements of every hour of the day in their logs, which never numbered fewer than six in current use, and often as many as fourteen in a flagship.

It is estimated that the total number of naval logs kept during the war approximated 1,000,000. But except in the preparation of narratives of the major actions recourse is not had to these original documents, for the chief points in each have been entered on cards for more easy reference. It has to be remembered, too, that telegrams passing to and out of the admiralty amounted to at least 1,000 daily, or 1,700,000 during the war. There were, besides, countless reports and Admiralty papers.

The records of the air service are only less formidable than those of the admiralty.

This vast mass of material at the disposal of the official historians has to be arranged and sifted by a staff of archival experts, one of whose duties is to discard tons of papers dealing with matters of no permanent historical importance.

The authors appointed have the assistance of a small staff of technical specialists, including cartographers. The forty-volume history will be illustrated by hundreds of maps, plans, diagrams, sketches and charts, apart from photographs of the water theatres of war without which it would be almost impossible to visualize the types of country in which the operations took place.

When once the narrative is committed to paper in chapter form it undergoes the minutest checking. Hundreds of copies are dispatched to officers who took part in the particular action dealt with, and after their criticisms and suggestions have been considered and, in many instances, adopted, the chapters are forwarded to the appropriate service department for remarks. In one instance a chapter was submitted to 873 officers.

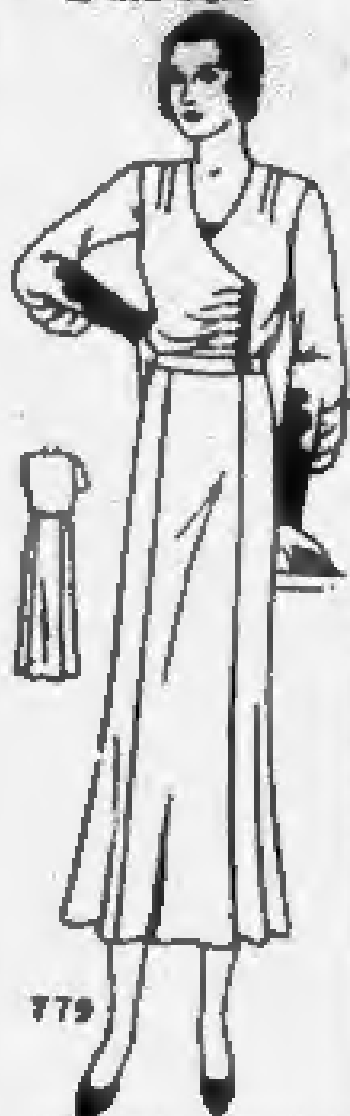

No other belligerent nation, it is asserted, can show such progress with their histories, although many are said to employ far larger staffs at much greater cost. Those who say at the end of the work are reminded that to date the expenditure represents, roughly, half as much as expended by the British in warfare during the last year of the conflict. Besides producing this volume war story, the historical section has to deal with thousands of inquiries from other departments, regimental historians, staff colleges and the general public.

completeness, many of which require previous reference to the records. The circulation of draft chapters of the history outside the writing of 4,000 letters.

It was explained in this correspondence that even in 1914 steps were taken to collect and arrange the records as they were received for the subsequent completion of the official history, and the actual writing was begun in 1918. The number of records which have to be consulted is stupendous. On the military side alone the historians have immediately at hand at least 50,000,000 sheets of documents and 50,000 maps. All of these are from the theatre of operations and do not include any of the multitude of "home" papers, such as their office files and the unconnected accumulation of other records.

IT'S SIMPLY ITSELF TO MAKE THIS CHARMING DRESS

Here's an individual dress you'll just love for its interesting detail. It's cut rather along slenderizing lines, making it equally suited for the slim or the matron.

The draped treatment of the bodice is very smart. And don't you think the puffed sleeves, lightened at the wrists, adorable?

A little crepe is clinging for to fashion it.

You can also use rough crepe silk, which is extremely popular. Wool crepe would also prove a charming medium.

Specialist Doctors Tobaccoists Cattle

Doctors Can Stop For In Transit The Roadward

Tobaccoists to a curative drama, starting doctors were told by Dr. Frank Miller, of Los Angeles, a specialist in lung diseases, speaking before the Southwest Clinical Conference at Kansas City.

Dr. Miller said he spoke from experience when he told victims of this disease to look into the tobacco with lungs, as he himself has been cured of the disease.

The great majority of cases were amenable to treatment, he said, if the patient is willing to subject to the necessary treatment and to live carefully. And moreover, he declared, persons who have been pronounced incurable of the disease are just as good risks, if not better, for his treatment as persons who other persons. This Dr. Miller said, was because cases having been stricken by poor health, they have learned how to care for themselves, and will not subject their bodies to the ravages other persons will.

Dr. Miller does not put considerable stress on the supposed hereditary nature of the disease.

"Forty per cent. of all persons have some kind of tuberculous infection," he said, "but only about one-third of these ever become clinical cases."

The most important aid to successful treatment, the doctor said, was the early recognition of the symptoms, and prompt systematic treatment.

After once having been cured a person may live wherever he pleases, Dr. Miller said.

Famous Cow Path

Valuable Property In Chicago One Is Used For The Other Purpose

A cow and her calf actually went down the world's most famous cow path in Chicago recently.

While passing citizens wondered what it was all about, many and her offspring passed for photographs in the concrete-paved path under a skyscraper at 100 West Monroe Street. The cow and the calf did their share in advertising the International Livestock Exposition.

The path is 177 feet long, 16 feet wide, and worth $177,000.

When William Jones sold the surrounding tract in 1888, he reserved the right to use the path for his cow. He made his reservation so binding that the path remains, even though no cow had used it for 30 years. A 20-story building is on the site, sitting air rights above the path.

Tree Planting Car Of The Canadian Forestry Association Completes Season's Work

Completing its season's work which during the past six months has taken it over 1,000 miles on the Canadian Pacific Railway Lines, in both Alberta and Saskatchewan, the tree planting car of the Canadian Forestry Association arrived in Regina recently, where the car will remain for the winter months.

Travelling over a large area of both northern Alberta and Saskatchewan, the car visited large districts where there has not been time during the past three, and even four years, where where conditions have been better. In that stage work made in all kinds. At every meeting held during the year, the increased interest being taken in tree planting, and more enthusiastic, war most noticeable, stated Alan Reeves, in charge of the car. In Alberta the car visited 40 towns, held 60 meetings to 11,000 people. The tour in Saskatchewan covered a longer period, 50 towns being visited, 114 meetings held, with a total of 20,314 attending. The total number who were present for lectures was 41,004, and this counts by a large number, the record of any previous year, over the same period. At every stage a musical meeting, after the regular evening one, was found necessary to accommodate all who came, many farmers people driving in from two to 25 miles from town.

A most interesting feature, in the increased interest amongst the younger people. Without doubt they are becoming more numerous. This presents a great deal for the future success of tree planting. Many of those called at the car, and others remained after the lecture, to ask questions, and secure information on many phases of the work. A few years ago this was unusual. Mr. Reeves tells of one young boy, who rode to 7 miles to hear him, to be prepared for the morning, bringing with him his available assets, amounting to 10 cents. He says, that this amount, all he said that he had, would not be sufficient to gain his outfit, but was quickly changed, to something but worry, on learning that he would not only see the programme, but still retain his money.

Amongst the older people, the confirmed believer of a few years ago, to the impossibility of having success with trees, has disappeared. Many still have the problems, of the necessary time, and labour, required to build up belts, as well as, other drawbacks to contend with, but are now sympathetic, and aware of the many advantages. One man and his wife drove to 12 miles to secure information, at the car, unable to remain for the meeting, they said that they had heard out what they wanted, and that their trip had been well worth while. The open discussion period at the end of the lecture, has become a popular feature, and many valuable points are expressed by unpolished and uneducated tree planters. Many, a number of years in various districts, who previously have been talking in hostility or protest their homes, about their intention of making a start. Two from points widely apart, one on the Red River, the other near Calgary, had been to their districts 20 years, and had made no attempt to build up a permanent belt. We have had a lot of them, they both said, but next year a start will be made.

For a month the car travelled through the northern border of the prairie area, and have been interested was shown, at every stop. Individuals turning to close land, waste in cutting, and an utter lack of appreciation of the native growth, has increased many districts, just a few years ago densely covered by native trees, that the farming people are now turning, having lost their protection, are beginning to suffer from many of the troubles of the western Prairie Farmer. Damage as it may seem, over large areas, which when settled was bush country, cut-down is becoming a major problem. Most of these people, are now, well aware of their mistake, and are not only doing considerable planting, but allowing, very wisely, trees to again take over many acres of non-agricultural land.

The last three, and even four years, in many districts, has not been kind to the planting of trees. During this time, it has been a most difficult thing to keep many of our other trees alive, and almost impossible to get out new ones, and expect them to grow. But it is under just such conditions, that we have been having, that trees can do so much for us. It is not surprising at all, that in those districts, we have lost large numbers of trees, but absolutely amazing, the large numbers which are still alive. As the car travelled between Edmonton and Saskatoon many fine belts were to be seen, in which no loss of life had taken place. The same applies to many more plantings. That trees have come through, under conditions which have made it impossible for the farmer to raise one bush of wheat and wheat is well known for its hardiness proves that we have trees that can stand the hardest knocks the Prairie has to offer. The ones which died out in such large numbers have been the willows, poplar, and maple, quick growing trees, but ones that are unable to withstand our periodic severe conditions. These trees have their place, for quick protection, for fuel and fence-posts, and planting around low spots, or dug-outs, but have no place in permanency. The ash, elm and the evergreen, and of course spruce, have come through with flying colours. Not only have they been able to live, but in even the worst drought areas, they have even been able to grow. That we have trees of this type, places tree planting for the future on a very sound basis. The future planter may use them with complete confidence. The future success of tree planting on the Prairie is assured.

Long Shadow Visible

From an altitude of 21,000 feet, an aerial photograph was made recently which covers 200 miles of territory. The picture was taken from a point 20 miles south of the Golden Gate, and shows both San Francisco and Mount Shasta, which are 200 miles apart, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It was made by using his own photograph which utilized the 1616-Mc Intosh-red light through a 25-cm. lens.

RUNS UPSTAIRS AT 92

Daughter's Pride in Active Father

"I feel in duty bound," writes Mrs. A. J. W., "to express my gratitude for the marvellous results my father has obtained from Kruschen Salts. They should really be called 'Miracles.' He is ninety-two years old, and is as fit as a fiddle. He can skip about, and run up and down stairs. His friends marvel why it is he is always alert, and never feels slack. His always tells them the reason, 'My regular daily dose of Kruschen Salts every morning.' We always recommend Kruschen Salts to all our friends. To my idea no family should be without it."

(Mrs.) A. J. W.
Most people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually they start the healthy Kruschen habit. Then they start getting rid every day of all waste matter from the system. New, healthy blood goes coursing through the veins. And almost immediately they feel their youth has returned; they feel young, energetic and happy. In a word, they've got that famous "Kruschen Feeling."

Now Comes Synthetic Ivory

For centuries billiard balls have been laboriously turned by hand from natural ivory. Few workmen could produce accurate spheres. Billiard balls of synthetic ivory, which are made with mathematical accuracy, were exhibited this year at the Leipzig fair and are claimed to be superior to the old form. They assure more accurate play, besides being fracture proof and indestructible.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

DECEMBER 11

THE CHRISTIAN'S USE OF LANGUAGE

Golden Text: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Corinthians 10:31.

Lesson: Leviticus 23:30-40; Nehemiah 8:9-18; Zechariah 8:5; Matthew 11:16-19; Mark 6:24-27; 1 Corinthians 10:31-33.

Devotional Reading: Philippians 4:4-9.

Explanations and Comments

A Time of Great Gladness—Nehemiah 8:10-17.—The people had not known the requirements of the Law, and they wept when they realized how they had transgressed them. The priestly circles would be in possession of traditions, usages, and even written documents, but such knowledge was clearly not the possession of the people.—J. E. McFadyen.

Nehemiah, the governor, Ezra, the priest, and the Levites comforted the people, saying: "This day is holy unto Jehovah your God; mourn not, nor weep." The day was holy because it was the day of the new moon and of the blowing of trumpets, and also because of the reading of the Law. It was an ill-omen to use words or signs of lamentation on a feast day, Hab. 2:20. "Go your way, eat the fat and drink the sweet (that is, do not fast nor mourn) and send portions unto him for whom nothing is prepared."

"The best way to create joy in our own hearts is to set ourselves to create it in others. In every circle there are many who look across a desolate world, which has no reassuring smile, no greeting voice, no loving or loyal heart. Look out for these. They hide for the most part like wounded game in the thicket. Go forth to be a joy-bringer to each."—F. H. Meyer.

"Neither be ye grieved," the speaker concluded, "for the joy of Jehovah is your strength." The preposition, "of," here signifies a causative force; it is a joy that he found in God; to God we have to seek it. "Holy joy is like oil to the wheels of your obedience."—Matthew Henry.

"And does not joy make us strong? What ambitious joy gives to the feet! The soul wears in a mile, the joyful heart is fresh and exuberant at the end of the tenth mile. If, then, the joy of the Lord is a man's strength, it must be his bounden duty to cultivate it, and with God's help enlarge it. The man is sinful as well as unwise who holds stubbornly to sorrow and depression."—J. H. Jewett.

A Time For Rest and Communion, Mark 6:30-32.—For several weeks the disciples had been off on a mission tour. Upon their return they rejoined Jesus at some well-known spot on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee, probably at Capernaum, and reported all they had done and all they had taught. They had been under a great strain, their experience had been exciting and exhausting, and Jesus proposed that they all go away for a short rest. Capernaum was crowded with pilgrims on their way to the Passover at Jerusalem. Crowds collected about them. They must find a secluded spot to be alone. They entered their boat and started for a "desert place" on the eastern shore of the Lake (as John tells us), near Bethsaida (as told by Luke). By a "desert place" is not meant an arid waste, but a lonely place, a spot far from the haunts of men.

"The whole spirit of the teaching of Jesus seems to sanction leisure, social intercourse, and the joys of recreation as well as of work."

Theory Of French Doctor

Believes Sleeping With Head To North Prevents Insomnia

A French physician comes forward with the theory that people suffering from insomnia will sleep better and be in a much better condition the next day, if they sleep with the head to the north and the feet to the south. Magnetic currents he maintains, flow from the north to the south, and will thus pass easily and freely through the body and produce quiet and rest. If they pass across the body he believes they will cause nervousness and irritation, prevent sleep and produce a feeling of restlessness and insomnia the following day.

Splendid Gift to Plymouth

Settlement Purchased By Lord and Lady Astor New City Property

Another splendid gift to Plymouth from Lord and Lady Astor is announced. This comprises the social settlement and institution known as Virginia House, which Lord Astor has decided to hand over to the city.

The Virginia House Settlement, which was founded by Lord and Lady Astor many years ago, is situated amid old stone property and close to the spot where Katherine of Aragon spent her first night on English soil when she came to marry Henry VIII. It has become a most successful centre for all manner of social, recreational, educational and religious purposes, and the buildings comprise a large hall, classrooms, gymnasium, kitchen, library and so forth.

The most recent addition, opened by Lady Astor is a large nursery at the Lane St. side of the settlement. It is equipped, among other things, with five or six rocking horses, several dolls' houses, go-carts, perambulators and other similar things dear to the hearts of children, some 50 of whom may be found there on any night of the five nights of the week on which the nursery is open to them.

An Effective Background

World's Grain Show Building Gradually Giving Promise of Beautiful Setting For Exhibits

The World's Grain Show Building is gradually giving promise of the very beautiful background that will be afforded to the exhibits of grains and grasses from all parts of the world at the congress to be held in Regina next year. Long rows of gorgeous red pillars will be topped by a fringe of feathery grain stalks patterned to bring out the contrasts of rich yellow wheats with the dark green of the "broome grass" or the pale tints of the ripe oats against the brown of the straw.

Along the ceiling, each electric light fixture is set into a formal design showing in contrasting tones of plants while just below the ceiling is a mural showing Canadian industries. The immense space of this great building are being divided up into exhibit stalls for this and that country and state.

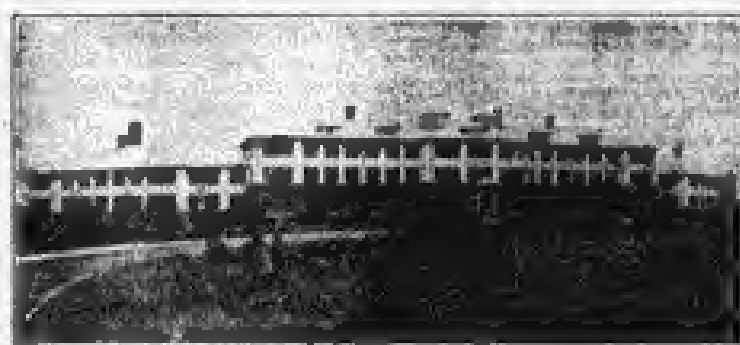

One corner is set aside for a great replica of the E. P. Ranch at High River. The back curtain is already in place and the rivers, and main geographic features of the ranch are already outlined on the floor, while the mountains are painted into the background.

The work was pushed as rapidly as possible before it got too cold for the workmen to stay there for it would require a forest fire to heat the place sufficiently for comfortable working in the winter time. A score of girls who are engaged making the designs for the pillars and walls have been moved to an office upstairs.

In the centre of the long hall is a carpeted spot where the champions of all classes will be displayed.

Preparation of the report of Major General D. C. Ormond, Dominion superintendent of penitentiaries, into the riots at Portsmouth penitentiary is under way.

Christmas Seal Sale PROVIDES FUNDS FOR Fight Against Tuberculosis

THE SASKATOON SANATORIUM

One of three similar institutions operated by the Saskatchewan Anti-Tuberculosis League. The others are located at Fort St. James and Prince Albert, and all are equipped to provide the most effective treatment known to medical science for coping with this dread disease. Approximately 150 patients are under constant treatment at these three centres, but thanks to the preventive work rendered possible by the sale of Christmas Seals, the death rate from tuberculosis was lower and the number of new cases less in 1931 than in the previous year.

During the last ten years the death rate among the white population of Saskatchewan has been reduced from 45 to 28 per 100,000 population. In the year 1931 Canada dug 7,427 graves for tuberculosis patients, and in the same period Saskatchewan dug 335 graves. When we figure out the cost of these tuberculosis deaths, taking into consideration travelling expenses to the sanatorium, one year's illness in the sanatorium, and the funeral expenses, we find that there is well over $2,000.00 of a loss with each death. Multiply this by the number of deaths during 1931 and you have three-quarters of a million dollars for Saskatchewan alone. And we must remember that this loss is preventable.

Prevention means earlier discovery, less spread of the disease, a shorter period of treatment, more recoveries, less new cases and less suffering and cost to the community.

Treatment is provided for out of taxes, and in Saskatchewan today, the Rural and Urban Municipalities are called upon to make their contribution while the Provincial Government also pays its proportion. The tuberculosis levy charged to the municipalities in Saskatchewan, both rural and urban, in 1930 amounted to $575,574.00. The levy in 1932 was $458,632.00—a reduction of $126,942.00 in 1932 under 1930. The per diem cost in 1929 was $3.02; in 1930, $2.92; in 1931, $2.65; and the estimated cost for 1932 is $2.55.

This, however, is not enough and, if the disease is to be stamped out, preventive work must be carried on. There is no assistance given by the municipalities, or by the Government, to do preventive work. The sale of Christmas seals provides the revenue for this purpose. The old saying "prevention is better than cure" applies with particular force in this connection. Preventive work is the most important phase of anti-tubercular work and this is financed by voluntary contributions.

As a result of the sale of Christmas Seals last year, 4,914 persons in Saskatchewan received examination or other attention. The money raised by the sale of Christmas Seals helps finance the care of newborn babies whose mothers were tuberculous; helps pay for the examination of those who have been in contact with tuberculous patients; helps finance the examination of those suspected by their physicians of having tuberculosis, and helps carry on an educational campaign.

Letters have been mailed to residents of every community in Saskatchewan containing sheets of Christmas Seals. Their value is one dollar a sheet—one cent a seal. These seals brighten up letters and parcels and the revenue they bring in helps to promote a great and necessary humanitarian work. Because the times are difficult the need for preventive work is greater than ever and the Anti-Tuberculosis League confidently relies upon the generosity of the people of Saskatchewan to enable it to meet whatever demands may be made upon it during the coming year.

Supported By the Law

British Police Know They Have Authority Back Of Them

The British policeman is backed up by the law for more effectively than officers in some countries. When he makes an arrest there are not a thousand loopholes in the criminal law by which an unscrupulous lawyer can free his man. There are not a lot of criminals who go untouched because they have influence. The British policeman very truly represents "the majesty of the law." He does not, as a usual thing, need to carry a weapon with him.

GAS EXPLOSION CREATES HAVOC IN MONTREAL

Montreal.—Ten persons trapped in a three-story dwelling here were rescued, and flames were satisfied that a disastrous series of explosions in sewers and gas mains of the north end of the city had claimed no lives.

The building collapsed when a terrific explosion occurred in the main directly beneath it. Ten persons were trapped but flames and debris from the city hospital dived into the wreckage and pulled out the family of Frederick Verreux and a family named Cyren.

They were taken to hospital suffering from cuts, bruises and burns but were not seriously injured.

Altogether some 20 people were injured as the explosion ripped through one street after another, damaging miles of sewers and tearing up miles of street paving in an area 10 blocks long by eight blocks wide.

The district affected is bounded by Deffurmont street, St. Lawrence boulevard, Jean Talon street and St. Hubert street. Damage estimates could not be gauged early, but the disaster meant work for thousands of unemployed in effecting repairs.

The cause of the disaster was unknown. The Montreal Light, Heat and Power Consolidated issued an official statement advancing the theory that the first explosion was caused by a sewer explosion of gasoline or other inflammable material and that the blast broke a gas main.

More than 100,000 huddled terror-stricken in their homes for three hours as the explosion reared out one after another, ripped up paving, smashed windows and culminated in the collapse of the three-story building which immediately caught fire. The building is situated at the corner of Deffurmont and St. Valer streets.

A manhole at the intersection of St. Denis and Belanger streets shot 20 feet into the air. A terrific roar followed. Sheets of flame belched from manholes for three-quarters of a mile and the district was covered with a pall of grey, black smoke. That was the beginning of the city's worst sewer explosion disaster. For the next three hours, blast after blast struck more and more fear into the hearts of a sixth of the city's population.

All over Montreal the blazes could be heard. Firemen from 22 stations rushed to the district. Over 500 police were concentrated in the area. Ambulances changed. So great was the danger of wholesale panic that advice was broadcast warning the people to stay at home and be calm.

At night and the boy wanted heat in the district was terrible as flames were shooting 20 to 30 feet high from all the manholes. Not one house on Belanger street from St. Hubert to St. Lawrence, 12 city blocks, had a window pane intact. The whole area affected was in total darkness shortly after the first explosion, and all traffic was tied up in hopeless confusion until police could straighten it out.

Edmonton Flyers Injured

See Falling on Wings of Machine Caused Crash

Edmonton, Alta.—Great McCoskie, Edmonton pilot, suffered a broken leg and other injuries, while his mechanic, Christopher Green, was hurt less seriously, escaping with a bad shaking up, when their aeroplane crashed a few moments after taking off from the city airport.

See falling on the wings of the plane caused the crash. The machine was badly damaged.

Prince Ben Winslow Is Out

Captured Oats Tide

Fred Mann Had Three Years' Raptn—Now With Norman Treble

Beaver Lodge, Alta.—Fred Mann, farmer of the Goodfellow district 20 miles west of Beaver Lodge, who captured the oats championship at the Chicago grain exposition, had three years' experience under the wing of Norman Treble, of Wembley, Alta., wheat king of the Chicago exhibition and noted agriculturist.

Mann was on a homestead on Sheep Creek. He is a Dane from the German province of Mecklenburg and spent three years as a prisoner of war in France when captured by the French during a raid. He came to this district five years ago after spending three years in the employ of Treble.

The sample of oats with which he captured the Chicago crown came from a ten-acre seed which produced 100 bushels to the acre and had a stand of 3 1-2 feet. The average weight was 57 pounds to the bushel.

To Curtail Production

From Seedling Strife Proposed By Alberta Farmers

Remedy, Alta.—Strong support is being given the call of Remedy district farmers for a wheat seedling strike next spring, according to reports reaching leading farmers in the movement.

Letters of support from members of various locals of the United Farmers of Alberta were submitted at a meeting of the Remedy local, and one report said 100 heads of the farm organization favored the strike.

Official recognition by farm organizations has not yet been given the strike. The Alberta wheat pool discussed the proposal but declined action and the plan will be debated when the annual convention of the United Farmers of Alberta is held in Calgary in January.

Speedy Return To Penny Postage Unlikely

British Postmaster-General Declines To Drop Form of Taxation

London.—Little hope of a speedy return to the penny post was held out by Sir Kingsley Wood, postmaster-general, when he referred to post office developments at a luncheon given by the Incorporated Secretaries' association at the Capone street station restaurant, E.C.

As postmaster-general, he said, he would naturally like to see a return to the penny post, but he could not but recognize that there was much in the contention that the 18,000,000 which the extra half-penny on the letter produced was probably less burdensome than any other form of taxation of similar yield, while the cost of collection was nil.

The state was certainly entitled to receive from the post office adequate payments in lieu of income tax and for the monopoly which was given to it.

British War Debt

States That Britain Will Pay Installment to U.S. on Dec. 15

London.—The Morning Post says it had learned authoritatively that Great Britain has decided to pay its December 15 war debt installment to United States.

Final details of the arrangement were presented to a cabinet meeting for ratification. The amount involved is $85,550,000.

Informal quarters expected the document might prove to be the most important since the war era so far as Great Britain is concerned, since it will review the whole range of inter-governmental obligations as well as the immediate debt installment.

The government tourist agency announces it will accept orders for visas from individuals who desire to leave Russia for permanent residence abroad. The cost, to be paid in foreign currency, is 500 rubles for workers and 1,000 rubles for all other classes. The ruble is nominally worth 25 cents in Canadian funds.

The foreigner will get his outgoing visa for the same charge assessed by his country against a Soviet passport.

Washington.—A new aid to health of children, discovery that salmon oil is twice as potent as cod liver oil in fighting the widespread childhood disease of rickets was announced by the United States Children's bureau.

Salmon oil contains twice as much vitamin D, the vitamin necessary to prevent and cure rickets, as does cod liver oil, until now the best known anti-rickets medicine.

NEW RULE TO BAR WINNERS AT CHICAGO SHOW

Chicago.—Under a new rule adopted by the management of the International Hay and Grain Show, after an exhibition has won the highest award obtaining in a crop contest three times, he will then be considered a "super-crop" man and barred from competition for three years before he can again compete in the class in which he won the crown.

This applies to any exhibitor whether he has had consecutive wins or the harvest spread over a number of years.

The new rule will mean that Norman Treble, Wembley wheat king, a four-time champion, will not be able to compete in the winning wheat classes again until 1935, and it will also bar Mrs. Mary E. Haysman, of Millard, Ont., who for three years has carried the blue ribbon for the champion sample of beans with her navy sailor.

In announcing the adoption of the new rule, H. S. Parkhouse, superintendent of the show, stated it is to encourage and give new and green exhibitors a better chance to score in the larger prizes.

The new rule, despite the consistent victories of Dominion exhibitors, is not, it was clearly stated, aimed at Canadian exhibitors but applies to all, including C. E. Trower of Lefebvre, Ind., who won the crown for the best corn in the show. It was his third premier honor and he will be barred till 1935.

Canada Big Winner

Domestic Captures Eight Titles at Chicago Grain Show

Chicago.—As the awards in the international livestock exposition and the hay and grain show began to pile up, it was found that the Dominion has secured eight crowns out of a possible 15, and scored heavily in all classes entered.

Vernon, British Columbia, turned in the biggest upset of the show when H. S. Middleton, captured the crown for the best sample of rye in the show, forcing the favorite, Albert Robinson, of Laura, Sask., to second place.

In the durum wheat competitions, George Avery, of Kalam, Sask., scheduled to take the crown, was forced to second place by the showing of T. E. Smith's samples which later took the reserve championships to Norman Treble's winning sample of hard red spring wheat.

Alberta led in the capturing of the coveted crown with Norman Treble secured the most important honor in the show—the grain championship—for the fourth time, while three other Albertans scored, Fred Mann, of Goodfellow, taking the sole crown, Fred Chaman taking the crown for alfalfa seed, west, which was the best of both divisions, and Eric Anderson, of Wembley, who took the Timothy crown.

From Saskatchewan, George Avery, of Kalam, won the best honey and has taken two seconds to date in the exhibit he has entered. Ontario has taken two crowns, field peas and the other in field beans.

The Religion of Co-operation

"My father once told me that unionism is self-sacrifice; it is the submerging of the individual to the good and to the advancement of the group," said Benjamin Riddle, Publisher, in a recent address. "It is the religion of co-operation, the highest expression of the helpfulness of comradeship and the strength of unity."

Strikes Becoming Fashionable

Strikes, so long considered by many as something to be endured but not encouraged, are becoming fashionable in many quarters outside the ranks of organized labor, says an exchange. Farmers of Iowa but recently indulged in a milk strike to maintain prices; corn belt farmers threatened a 90-day non-selling strike to create markets for products; physicians in Cuba discussed a strike against clinics. Soon they may be accepted as respectable by what is known as "our best people" in polite society.

The Unnecessary Lieut.-Gov.

There must be something in the science of government as it affects popular opinion that the ordinary man does not grasp, says the Sun Star. In those days when money is scarce and everybody cautions everybody else to live within their incomes, the Ontario Government appoints an unnecessary Lieut.-governor. It is said that the office costs the Ontario taxpayer $40,000 a year. In Toronto the more perhaps has its compensations, as it provides an other social center where the boys can inhabit their boiled shirts and the girls their glad clothes. But in the rest of Ontario the whole idea goes down as a piece of costly humbug.

The Robot Has the Last Word

Not satisfied with the invention of the mechanical robot, some wise tinkers with fate, says the Typo Journal, has devised what he is pleased to term a chronology, a device which records the actual time worked on any machine to which it may be attached. The machine starts, this fact being registered to a split second. The operator stops to talk hockey or politics, the time thus consumed shows on the tape. Cumulative time is recorded, so is idle time, working time, lunch time, production. Workmen can see the tape but the foreman carries a key that unlocks the tattle-tale. If there is a shutdown, a red light signals, and the delay is registered in bold figures that all may read. True, the worker may dial the reason of stoppage but so does the chronology, and it has the last say. There must be agreement, or the worker's alibi is shot full of holes. The main object seems to be to speed up production and carve off another pound of flesh for the glory of modern methods.

With the Carriers.

The risks for the present President vs. Vice-Pres. draw were chosen by these officers, and the personnel of the risks are as follows:

Travel from the towns and villages of Canada into the major cities and vice-versa from the cities to the towns and villages as well as inter-city travel has been given an unprecedented impetus by the policy of the Canadian Pacific Railway in introducing the low rate bargains return excursion fares into the company's activities during the current year. Since February last and up to mid-November for the West of Canada, the railway's passenger department from a figure of $1,000 passengers who have availed themselves of these exceptional opportunities to familiarize themselves with the Dominion.

The beautiful countryside of Canada to all the seasonal aspects has been brought to the doors of the city dweller and the people of the cities have learned to get acquainted with their fellow-citizens of other cities to a degree probably unparalleled in Canadian history to this innovation in railway operation. Distances have been annihilated by three extremely low fares and from the Maritime Provinces to Montreal; from Montreal to the borders of western Ontario, to the capital of Canada, to the ancient city of Quebec, to Toronto, London and on to Windsor, Detroit and Chicago, and to scores of intermediate places, there is scarcely a point that has not been brought into close touch with all others.

She said, "You know what I want to talk about." She asked pointedly, "When your term is up next month, are you going to re-enlist or not?"

Alan knew that Elizabeth was determined, heart and soul, that he should get out of the Mounted and take a good selected position down in Victoria which Colonel Steele, commander of his regiment in the World War, had been wanting him to accept. But he was loath to take a job on a friendship basis; he preferred to stand on the more self-respecting ground of honest work honestly performed. And to leave this land where he had found freedom and happiness was an intolerable prospect. He loved this northern Machemite country as intensely as he hated the stifling oppression of city life; and his comradeship with men like Bill Hardwick was precious to him.

If he tore himself away from all this, if he became a mere cog in an industrial machine, he would be uprooted and miserably unhappy.

But as things stood, he was in a bind. Elizabeth was riding him hard for personal reasons; a rank injustice had been done him. . . . There were a dozen powerful arguments on the other side, too.

After a moment he said slowly: "I suppose I oughtn't to sign on again. But it's hard to decide, Elizabeth."

"What is there to decide about? How can you tolerate this situation you're in? You're a subordinate, taking orders; you're liable to be demoted any day; you're compelled to do another man's work for him! You don't think your situation is going to change? You aren't expecting a commission any more now, I hope? Then why under heaven do you want to stay?"

Alan started to answer, but he checked the words. His reasons were deep and intangible things—his friendships, the freedom he'd found here, the sense of being rooted in the country, his rambling duties that held him with invisible hands, his unwillingness to desert comrades when they sorely needed him, his reluctance to give the impression of having just fled because a commission was not forthcoming.

W. H. U. 1971

Down on the river bank Bill Hardwick came striding full-on up to the landing, reversed the canoe around in a complete circle to stop it, leaped out upon the plank, tossed the pointer to a sleepy Launchman. He did not seem to notice Inspector Haskell only a couple of rods away. At a leap he leaped up the terrace, straight for Alan's cabin, as though Alan was the man to hear his news.

"If you had nothing to tell me, I wouldn't bother you," Elizabeth persisted. "It would be a little different, but you've got a position waiting, at four times your present salary, with advancement sure, with a chance to make even more on the side." She broke off: "But what's the use going over and over these arguments? We've gone over them a dozen times, I didn't come for that."

She poured a second to emphasize her next words. "If you intend to stay in the Mounted, I wish you would tell me as frankly as that I can plan."

It was an ultimatum. She meant it so; Alan understood it so. But she saw too that it had misapprehended him a little. Though she must be firm now, she must head off any intimation.

Dropping her cushions, she got up and stood beside him where he sat on the corner of the table.

"Alan! Don't you realize how intolerable it is for me—not being with you two hours in a whole week? And if we were married, he—Haskell—he'd make it even worse. You know why he's sending you out on these patrols and letting you be here just long enough to manage the post. When you're gone he forces his company on me. If I'd require him, he'd—he'd take it out on you! I've got to let him—"

A slow red crept into Alan's face and his fist clenched. He had wondered, sometimes with unreasoning suspicion, why she allowed Haskell to be so much in her company. Now

Alan Was Not the First to Follow
Haskell Was Stalling.

Drummond and others had hinted about it to him, implying it was not very honest of her. Here was the reason! It had never occurred to him that Elizabeth had been permitting it for his sake.

He thought: "I can't blame her for not wanting to live here in the North. Her brother died here; she hasn't any friends; these folks don't understand her. If she wants to live in a city, that's as natural, as much her right, as my wanting to live in this North country. She'd like to have pleasure, clothes, and other things we'll have when I take that Victoria job. Wouldn't any girl want that?"

Bill Hardwick came past the above window, bottom, excited. Elizabeth saw him, and resumed her talk with Alan. He looked at her, but she did not greatly care. She had given him her ultimatum, she had headed off any intimation; and what she said about Haskell had put him as nothing she could have done.

She half-whispered, running her fingers through his hair. "You've been here less than an hour, we've had less than ten minutes together, and now—now something else happens and you'll be gone again." She blurted this quickly and turned away.

As Bill Hardwick stamped into the cabin he burst out: "Oh Lord, Alan, Benny-bell sure popped down river! The Midnight Run, bringing up a raft of furs from the Ramparts country, and gold dust, too, a whole load of it from the Post and Arctic Red Pioneers. . . . Down there, mouth of the Big Alouche, when she was taking on wood, half a dozen men burned her to broad daylight, and scuttled her down, right this close to us—"

"Burned her? What's that?"

"That's what they did. They came over the side like us if they were ordinary trappers; they got a chest drop on the crowd, and had the run of the boat for better or half an hour!"

Alan leaped to the all-important question. "They didn't escape, did they? They didn't get by with a trick like that?"

Scarcely hearing him, Bill kept pouring out his news. "They took more's three hundred pounds of dust, and sorted out half a dozen packs of the best and lightest furs. Alan, they shot and killed Jimmy Macgownery! He was the only one that drew a gun against 'em, and a rifle got him told."

Alan's face went pale. The crew of the robbery had been doing enough to him; but now, this crushing shock of Jimmy's death. . . . He spoke fast, almost stammering, "They killed Jimmy. . . . A rifle bullet. . . . He was the only one who drew a gun—" But he could not speak; he could only stare at Bill.

"And if Father Cleverly hadn't stopped in and helped stop a rush, Alan, they'd have shot up the whole deck. They stung the dust and furs into their canvas, and. . . . Did they get away? What brought me hunting up the river? I hope they did—clean, either's a wonder!"

In the pause then, Alan sought to shake off his shock. He had to make the plan, bring out a patrol, get into action. It was all in his hands—the patrol, the capture, the whole heavy responsibility.

He demanded: "Was were they? Trappers, did you say?"

"Don't know who, Alan, but strong-arms. Five whites and one 'breed'."

"Strong-arms? Can't be! Not in this country."

"But that's what they were. Nobody on the boat had ever seen a single one of 'em."

Alan did not believe this, but for the moment he passed it up.

"Which way did they go? Move markers on their canvas?"

"No. Paddle craft. They whipped up the Big Alouche."

For a little space Alan stood thinking. Why had these headless staged their robbery there at the mouth of the Alouche, instead of further down north, at some lonely reach along the Machemite? In an instant he saw the answer to that question. They had chosen with an eye to a quick escape, an escape to the best hiding place in all Machemite territory.

As he imagined them whipping up the Big Alouche, whipping up that lonely spruce-barked river past MacMillan's trading post, his thoughts leaped to Joyce, and a fear came into his eyes.

Echoing this very fear, Bill said: "They'll have to pass MacMillan's place, Alan. You chances to see, Dave's gone out somewhere after spring poultry and Joyce is there all by herself."

"But maybe they won't stop," Alan argued. His words were more a prayer for Joyce. "They'll probably try to sneak past. . . . He broke off: "Bill, go down to barracks, and get, tell him to get the launch in shape to travel. While you're doing that, I'll go tell Haskell."

Halfway down the steps Alan came upon Constable Larry Young, who was spreading Haskell's bad clothing on the grassy terrace to sun.

An older man, past forty, a native of this Waterways country, Larry had spent his boyhood years living with Croes and Chipewyan; and by some side he was the best back detective in the whole division. But in matters of discipline he was worse than Bill Hardwick, for he was older, more set in his ways, more respectful of people.

most effort. Months ago Haskell had lured him from a corporal, and by humiliating him with orderly duties, he had been trying to make Larry humble under. Waiting for another month's pay so he could lay out of the Mounted, Larry was going about his "sparework" with silent frown, chafing at his personal score against the day when he would be out of service and could settle with Haskell in man-to-man fashion.

Alan told him: "Larry, drop that. Go and help Bill out. He'll tell you what's up."

It was rare that Inspector Haskell allowed his temper to get the upper hand. He had learned self-control in the hard army school, and he considered that any exhibition of temper was a shameful thing. But when Alan Baker came into the cabin, Haskell was thoroughly and hotly angered.

A dozen things had happened this morning to irritate him. Constable Whipple, his stool pigeon, a thin clerical recruit whom he had brought along to headquarters, had repeated several infuriating jokes about him which the men were laughing back and forth in barracks. A few minutes ago Bill Hardwick, plainly carrying important news, had brushed past him as though he had not noticed, and had taken the news straight to Alan Baker. And just now through the open door he had seen Baker order Larry Young to drop work assigned by a superior officer and do something else.

Little Help For This Week

"And the Lord shall guide thee constantly, and safely thy end is brought."—Isaiah 58:11.

Wherever He may guide me
No want will turn me back;
My Shepherd is beside me,
And nothing can I lack.
His wisdom ever watcheth,
His sight is never dim,
He knows the way He taketh,
And I will walk with Him.
—A. L. Waugh.

Abandon yourself to His care and guidance, as a sheep in the care of a shepherd, and trust Him entirely. He neither thought you may seem to yourself to be in the midst of a desert with nothing green about you, and may think you will have to make a long journey before you can get into the green pastures. Our Shepherd will turn that very place where you are into green pastures, for He has power to make the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose.—H. W. R.

An Interesting Review.

The third annual review of the world grain market situation by United Grain Growers Limited, which was presented at the annual meeting of the Company held recently in Saskatoon, has just been published. As in previous years, the review contains a concise summary of statistics relating to world production of and world trade in wheat, and at the same time discusses various developments in the wheat situation. It is pointed out that there is still, as there have been for several years, special circumstances connected with the supply of wheat, which would make fairly low prices inevitable. But the general depression which now for over four years has afflicted the world is considered even more important as a depressing factor in prices. This year's world production outside of Russia and China is practically the same as last year, but more than can be consumed within a year, probably less than consumption would be under conditions which would permit a normal flow of trade and larger consumption of wheat in importing countries where prices have been kept very high by tariffs. Developments in the United States, in Russia, in Great Britain and in continental Europe, are discussed, and the whole review will repay careful reading.

It is understood that a copy has been mailed to each shareholder of the Company, while others interested may procure copies at any elevator or office of United Grain Growers Limited.
